P R O N O U N C I A T I O N S An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at Daily Press Office, Hongkong.
For comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the words which a native speaker of the language is likely to wish to express are fully illustrated and explained, forming a valuable and a most instructive nature. By the Court and Pundit pronunciations are given the accents being carefully marked on the alphabet. The work is arranged in five times display the success of an attempt to make Chinese and English type correspond in the of body, thereby effecting a vast economy space, securing a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margin and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications.

An Illustrative series of the work, following forms submitted for consideration Chalmers' Vocabulary contains about 15,000 Chinese characters, and Medhurst's Chinese Dictionary about 100,000.
The present work contains about 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars a other elementary works as yet published, it student of this difficult language absolutely gives examples to display the various applications and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains nearly five times as many as any other Dictionary hitherto published.

For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, the reference to it enables a native speaker of the language to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to Europeans residing in China, and to the native traveller. It explains subjects fully with very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted To parties resident in England and interested in China it cannot but be invaluable occasionally it comprises upwards of two thousand large quarto pages.
